Riley Neff Warner is a member of Best Best & Krieger LLP's Environmental and Natural Resources practice group in the firm's Bend office. His practice focuses on renewable energy, natural resource use and development, land use, and Native American law. He also provides clients with general counsel advice.

Prior to law school, Riley and his family lived in Juneau, Alaska, where he and his wife worked on public health issues. A proud graduate of the University of Washington School of Law, Riley and his family enjoy being outside as much as possible.
